PAYNE RIVER FISHING CAMP

The Payne River is a major Arctic river which is the main watershed for Quebec's northwest tip and it flows into Ungava Bay. The Payne River Fishing Camp is located 25 miles upriver from Ungava Bay and the Inuit settlement of Kangirsuk. The tides, which are among the most significant in the world, reaching 40 miles inland, and measuring 30 feet deep, drain and fill the Payne Fjord twice a day.

You'll fish the tidal schedule, going out and coming back on high tide, for powerful and explosive Arctic Char ranging from 4 to 12 lbs.

The Fish ...

ARCTIC CHAR

“High-octane silver rockets ... the best fighting fish you can catch in numbers!”

Arctic Char may be the last best kept secret amongst fishermen. A schooling fish, char are aggressive and will readily take, or attack, an appropriately presented fly. Once hooked up, hang on! Pound for pound the Arctic Char takes a back seat to no other fish. And, while their initial run is breathtaking, they are certainly not one-run wonders. Sustained, multi-run fights are the rule!

The char in the Payne River run from 4 to 12 lbs. with the camp record being 18 lbs.

You'll marvel at how a fish of this size can fight. Good equipment is a must. Fried reels are not uncommon.

The Fishing ...

“For numbers? It’s the best char river in the world!”

A big part of the experience is fishing with an Inuit guide and learning about their culture.

This isn't just a fishing trip, it's an adventure! 30 foot tides; Inuit guides; 24 foot freighter canoes; icy, brackish water; rugged, raw beauty; BIG river. And world class fishing for char. It's not uncommon to catch over 50 Arctic Char on a fly rod per day! As the tide empties the fjord it concentrates the fish. You'll either fish from exposed banks or from a freighter canoe anchored in current. You'll fish large streamers down and across the current, stripping the fly quickly to entice a strike. And strike they do! When they feel the hook, hold on!

Tunulik II Camp facilities include three oil-heated two person cabins, a separate kitchen/dining cabin, shower facilities, generated electricity, freezers and Sat phone communications.

TUNULIK II FISHING CAMP

The Tunulik II Fishing Camp sits on an exposed granite bluff overlooking the Lagrevé River, 1 1/2 miles inland from Ungava Bay. Below camp you'll wade and fish waters seldom more than 100 feet wide for fresh, 1 to 3 lb. sea-run Brook Trout. Above camp, you'll take freighter canoes powered by jet outboards to access seven miles of pools and runs where you'll wade for more sea-run brookies and some monster native brookies (up to 10 lbs.!).

This remote camp is open for just 3 1/2 weeks each year during the peak of the sea-run Brook Trout migration from late August to mid-September.

BROOK TROUT

*“When I saw the size of that brookie,
I thought I’d died and gone to heaven!”*

Tunulik II and the Lagrevé River offer multiple species including Arctic Char, Brook Trout and, on rare occasions, Atlantic Salmon. But, truth be told, fishermen come for the Brook Trout.

The sea-run brookies migrate up the river in quantity. They are lightly colored from their time in the ocean and they’re quite aggressive and scrappy because they are hungry. Catching countless 1 to 3 lb. sea-runs is nothing short of addicting. But it’s the 2 to 6 lb. natives that steal the show. There are few places on earth where you can catch trophy Brook Trout like these.

The 1 to 3 lb. sea-run Brook Trout are plentiful and aggressive

We practice strict catch and release on the native Brook Trout to protect this special fishery for future fishermen

If you want to catch a trophy Brook Trout, Tunulik II is the place to go!

Is there a more beautiful fish on this planet than a native Brook Trout?

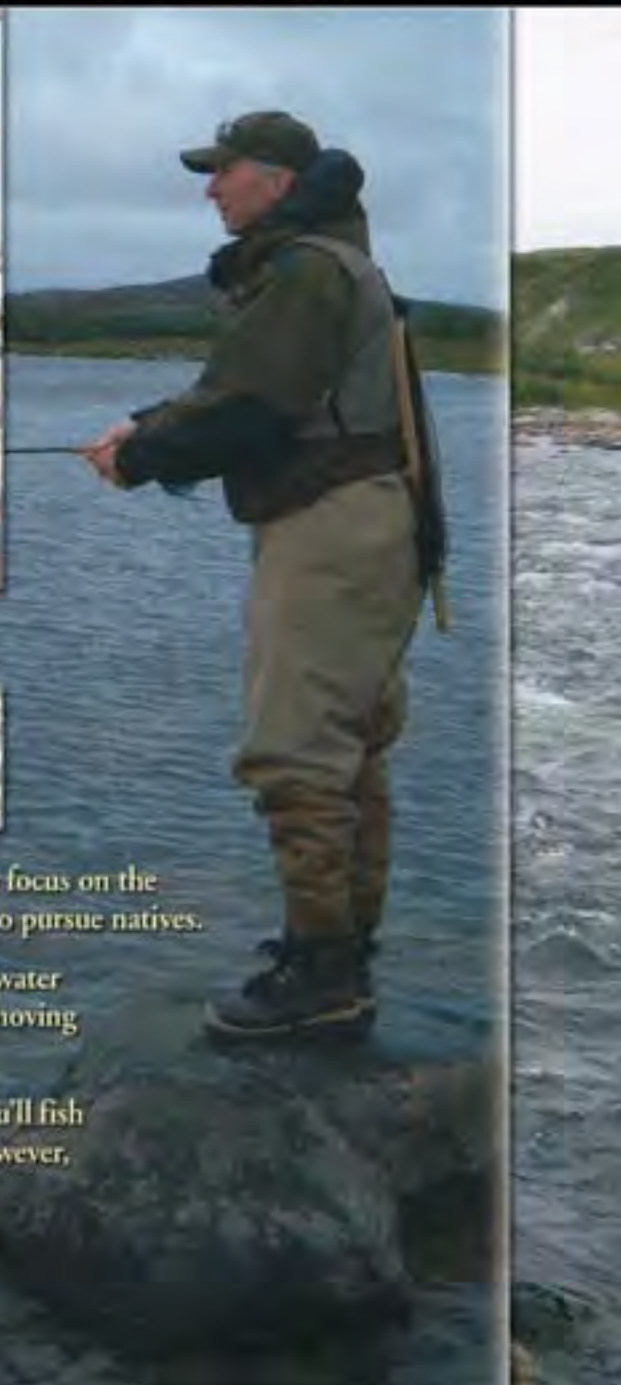

"I caught 41 sea-runs standing on one rock!"

With just 6 people in camp, you'll fish 3 to a guide and either focus on the sea-run brookies and char below camp or go upriver by boat to pursue natives.

Fly fishing for the sea-runs is about as action-packed as fresh water fly fishing can get. You'll find that these fish want to chase a moving fly. And they will spank it! Hundred-fish days are possible!

The big native brookies require more patience and finesse. You'll fish pools and runs and you'll work for these fish. The reward, however, is worth it. A trophy Brook Trout is tough to top!

Two fishing camps

Two remarkable fisheries

Two incredible adventures

*Arctic Adventures, in the

Inuit owned ...

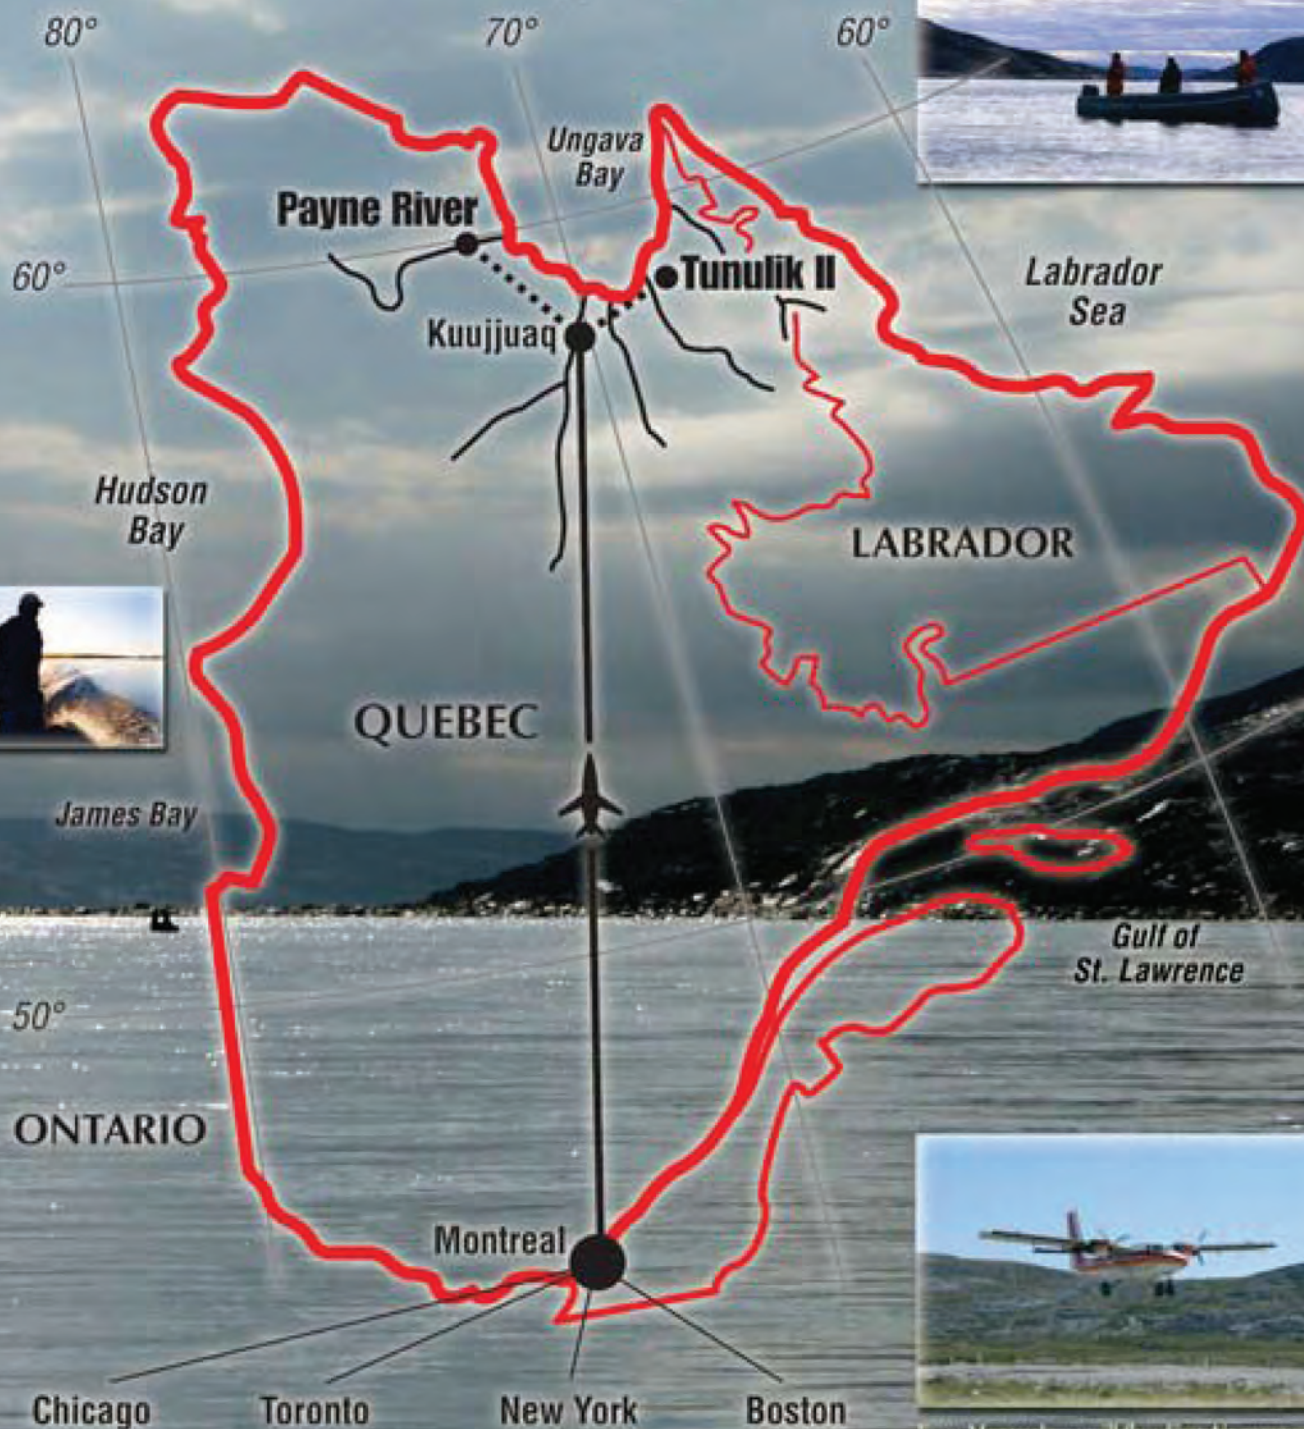

Arctic Adventures camps are Inuit-owned (since 1969) and offer you access to the true untamed north. You'll see scenic vistas and remarkable wildlife which can include nesting falcons and eider, caribou, seals, even musk-ox!

*While catch and release is the rule,
your guides will keep enough fish
for a tasty shore lunch.*

"These are true adventures of a lifetime!"

From Montreal you will fly a First Air commercial jet to Kuujuuaq from which you'll take a Twin Otter to fly either to the Payne River Fishing Camp or the Tunulik II Fishing Camp where your Arctic Adventure begins!
